Craig is a seasoned technology leader with deep expertise in advanced networking, cybersecurity, and IT solutions. He founded and operated Veritech Consulting Group, a Morgantown-based IT firm that drew the attention of Citynet, which later acquired the company. With the acquisition, Craig and his team brought their strong technical skills to Citynet, where they played a key role in building and expanding the company's Managed Services division.

Today, Craig serves as Senior Vice President and a member of Citynet's executive team. He provides sales engineering and account management for strategic clients, contributes to the Security Advisory Team, and leads the security practice within Citynet's Managed Services. Known for his consultative approach, Craig simplifies complex technology challenges for customers, earning the trust of many of the region's most recognized businesses. He also ensures Citynet remains aligned with top-tier technology partners and the latest industry advances.

Craig holds dual Bachelor of Science degrees in Computer Engineering and Electrical Engineering from West Virginia University. His professional interests include enterprise networking, cybersecurity defense, internet and network security, telecommunications, and business continuity and risk management. As a Technical Solutions Specialist with Cisco Systems, one of Citynet's premier partners, Craig also maintains technical and sales certifications from Cisco, Palo Alto Networks, VMware, and Microsoft.

Outside of work, Craig enjoys cooking, poker, traveling, fishing, boating, and photography. He is actively involved in his community, volunteering with charitable organizations and serving on several nonprofit boards. Craig lives in Morgantown, West Virginia, with his wife Anne and their two children, Alex and Hannah, and works out of Citynet's Morgantown office.
